April 2017

It's here! I have been overwhelmed by the number of awesome people who told me how excited they were that Into the Yellow Zone was coming out. It released on March 31 in both paperback and Kindle, and audio book will be coming later this year.

Just released – *Into the Yellow Zone

YA/Dystopian/Sci-Fi

The journey continues...

Isabella and the Callaway tribe continue their journey to warn the mutant tribes about the danger that awaits them after the shelter people emerge from underground... in 50 years. But they don't know of the imminent danger that awaits them if they are captured. Isabella's brother Luke escapes from the military and continues chasing his sister through the dangerous Yellow Zone – the areas of highest contamination, to try to warn her. Along the way, both the tribe and Luke meet up with an old scientist who is close to finding a vaccine to protect the shelter people from the toxic Outside. If he is successful, it will change everything they know about the future!

$0.99 on Kindle or $10.99 paperback.

AUDIOBOOK Recommendation

WWW: Wake, by Robert J. Sawyer

Overall ***** Performance ***** Story *****

First in the WWW trilogy, this novel from my favorite Canadian SF author brings together a blind teenage math genius in Toronto with an internet blackout in China, a sign language, painting chimp in San Diego and a blossoming intelligence hiding in the internet to weave together a story of epic proportions. Snarky, insightful, and thought provoking, this story demonstrates why I thoroughly love Sawyer's novels. One of the unique features of the audio is that it is narrated by four different people, truly bringing each unique character to life. I can't wait to download the second and third books in the series.
