

The Lynda Engler Newsletter

July 2016

Hi folks! Well, the summer is rolling along, and I've got lots going on. Beyond the writing, my life is hectic as always. Still working on that graduate degree; I'm taking just one summer class, because one is enough in a 16 week semester jammed into ten! On week eight now, then I get four weeks off before beginning the Fall semester. Three more classes to go, plus my Thesis, and I'll be graduating in May – assuming I get it all done!

Here's all the cool things happening this month.

TIME'S ANCHOR RELEASE! -- A Time Travel Short Story

Ophelia's husband disappears at the most inopportune times. After 10 years, she's not sure why she puts up with it, other than the fact that she's loved him since she first saw him in college, before the physics experiment that started Will involuntarily sliding through time. And there's nothing anyone can do about it. Or is there?

5-day FREE promo on Amazon. July 12-16, 2016

"...fantastically written Young Adult dystopian novel... This is a must read!!!! I can't wait for the sequel! A++" Review, Fiona J Brady.

16-year-old Isabella has grown up believing mutants are sub-human, stupid and would eat every shelter person if they had the chance, until she spies a wandering mutant tribe through the glass bottom swimming pool that is her shelter's only light source.

She is fascinated by their leader, Malcolm. But is she brave enough to go OUTSIDE no matter what danger lurks?

INTO THE OUTSIDE – Audio book coming in August!

Produced by Carlo Libertini of Boston, MA, this will be a 6+ hour unabridged narration of the novel. It will be available on Audible for subscribers. Check my webpage for updates on release date.

SEQUEL UPDATE – Into the Yellow Zone has gone out to beta readers and with their help, I have crafted it into something ready for its final edit. Projecting a September release date, if all goes well.

Isabella and the Callaway tribe continue their journey to warn the mutant tribes about the danger that awaits them after the shelter people emerge from underground... in 50 years.

But they don't know of the imminent danger that awaits them if they are captured. Isabella's brother Luke escapes from the military and continues chasing his sister through the dangerous "Yellow Zone" – the areas of highest contamination, to try to warn her.

Along the way, both the tribe and Luke meet up with a crazy old scientist who is close to finding a vaccine to protect the shelter people from the toxic Outside. If he is successful, it will change everything they know about the future!
