

The Lynda Engler Newsletter

March 2017

I had the pleasure of being interviewed last week by Fiona Mcvie, a UK Blogger who posts about her favorite authors. You can read the review at authorsinterviews.wordpress.com.

I'm very excited to announce that Into the Yellow Zone (book two of the Into the Outside series) is releasing March 31 in both paperback and Kindle.

Coming March 31st – Into the Yellow Zone

The journey continues...

Isabella and the Callaway tribe continue their journey to warn the mutant tribes about the danger that awaits them after the shelter people emerge from underground... in 50 years. But they don't know of the imminent danger that awaits them if they are captured.

Isabella's brother Luke escapes from the military and continues chasing his sister through the dangerous Yellow Zone – the areas of highest contamination, to try to warn her. Along the way, both the tribe and Luke meet up with an old scientist who is close to finding a vaccine to protect the shelter people from the toxic Outside. If he is successful, it will change everything they know about the future!

5 STAR AUDIO BOOK REVIEW – Into the Outside

March 2, 2017: Todd Oliver, self-proclaimed lover of almost anything post-apocalyptic, zombie, or scifi, posted this review on Audible:

Into the Outside was a great post apocalyptic book about a family living in an underground shelter after a nuclear war had destroyed most of humanity. The people who did manage to survive outside of a shelter mutated. The mutants mature much faster and have shorter life spans due to all the toxins left from the war. Isabella is part of a shelter family. She sees a family of mutants on their land and gets curious enough to sneak out and meet them. After realizing that they aren't much different from her, she decides to leave her sheltered life and venture out into the world. Not only have people mutated, but the animals have as well. Some of the people mutated into something much worse, eaters! Excellent performance by Carlo Libertini. Looking forward to book 2!

The Last Tribe, by Brad Manuel

Overall ***** Performance ***** Story *****

When the world succumbs to a virus, the Dixon family finds themselves among the few survivors. Four brothers, all married with families, scattered around Ohio, North and South Carolina, and one 14-year-old stranded at boarding school in Massachusetts, all try to get through the winter and meet at the brother's hometown, Hanover NH, in the spring. Their journeys and struggles depict the best of humanity. It was refreshing to listen to an exciting story where people come together to survive, adapt, and prosper, rather than battling the last few who live. Scott Brick's narration is perfect, giving voice to each unique character.

Time Trap, by Micah Caida

When a teenage girl awakens in the desert, with no memory of who she is or where she is, the authorities think she is a Native American runaway. A private school in Albuquerque takes her in, on scholarship, but that's where her troubles really begin. A ghost in the desert tells her her name... a deadly beast morphs into a bird and tries to kill her and her new friends ... and finally they fall through a computer monitor into a strange new world where the colorful humanoid natives think they are deadly Tec-nah-tee.

USA Today bestseller Micah Caida brings Rayen's story to life with as much adventure and romance as scifi in this young adult coming-of-age thriller.
